Watamu Town and Beach

Watamu is a coastal town in Kenya, located north of Mombasa. The approximate distance is 108 kilometers from Mombasa town, on your way to Malindi. Traveling from Mombasa to Watamu by road is a captivating experience as you go past the breathtaking view of tall palm trees along Mtwapa and Kilifi towns.

Upon arrival, you are greeted by the sight of locals going about their daily activities and tuk-tuks navigating through the streets. Another common sight is Makuti restaurants and hotels that add a touch of authentic coastal life to the growing town. Not forgetting the warm tropical climate that might deceive you into thinking that the sun on the coast is not too hot.

As you move further from the town towards the ocean, your attention drifts to the beautiful hotels along the beach. You only catch a glimpse of each because most seamlessly blend with their natural surroundings.

Most are located on grounds with lush, well-maintained greenery. The architecture also complements the surrounding trees and landscape. The design may also incorporate eco-friendly elements, such as treehouse-style accommodations, wooden structures, or large windows to bring the outside in.

On the opposite side sits the ocean and its expansive beaches. Characterizing the Watamu beaches are powdery white sands, crystal-clear turquoise waters, and a tranquil atmosphere that offers a perfect escape from the hustle and bustle of everyday life. Along the shoreline, you may encounter local fishermen going about their daily activities, nesting sea turtles, and a beehive of activity by tiny white crabs as they get in and out of the sands.

But Watamu is not just about these handful experiences. It is a haven to multiple wonders some of which aren't available elsewhere on the Kenyan coastal beaches. Some of these include the Watamu Marine National Park, Turtle Watch, Mida Creek, Love Island, water sports and activities, turquoise waters, coral reefs, dolphins' watch, and cultural attractions.

Watamu Marine National Park

The Watamu Marine National Park is a mesmerizing aquatic haven that envelops a captivating blend of turquoise waters, coral reefs, and a colorful assortment of flamboyant fishes. The fishes feature scales adorned in shades of blue, yellow, green, orange, and white and black patterns. They create a spectacle as they nibble on coral with their beak-like mouths, or dart through the crystalline waters leaving behind a trail of vibrant energy.

The coral reef system of the Watamu Marine Park is extensive and spectacular. The corals appear in various shapes and sizes to form beautiful patterns and create a vital ecosystem. Watamu's crystal-clear waters form a cover for the delicate gardens that are home to a dazzling array of marine life. Schools of fish, from tiny gobies to majestic parrotfish, navigate through the corals, creating a lively and harmonious dance. Turtles gracefully glide through the water, and inquisitive seahorses peek out from their hiding spots, adding a touch of enchantment to this underwater paradise.

Mida Creek

Mida Creek emerges as a hidden gem as you navigate deeper into the ocean from its neighbouring beaches. The destination is a true sanctuary of natural beauty that beckons both nature enthusiasts and serenity seekers alike. As mangrove forests meet the shimmering waters of the Indian Ocean, you notice a shift appearance of the waters and the climate. The waters are darker, and the climate is cooler.

The mangrove forests, with their labyrinthine roots, serve as a nursery for countless marine species, providing a vital refuge for juvenile fish and crustaceans. Beneath the surface, a bustling underwater community thrives, with seahorses, crabs, and a plethora of fish species navigating through the intricate web of mangrove roots.

Mida Creek is not merely a scenic landscape; it is a pulsating ecosystem that breathes life into the coastal environment. The mangroves play a pivotal role in stabilizing the shoreline, preventing erosion, and acting as a natural buffer against storm surges. The salt-tolerant vegetation of the mangroves, including the iconic Rhizophora species, stands tall against the changing tides, creating a resilient ecosystem that withstands the test of time.

Watamu Water Sports and Activities

Dolphin Safaris/Dolphin Watch: Watamu's waters are frequented by playful dolphins, and specialized safaris offer the chance to witness these intelligent creatures frolicking in their natural habitat. The experience which blends excitement and awe allows you to get a glimpse of the magic of the high seas.

The dolphin's watch safari begins early in the morning. The length of the safari depends on the beach where the trip commences. Sometimes the trip may incorporate other activities such as a stopover at the tortoise bay, a marine park trip, and lunch at Mida Creek.

The first step of the safari is a briefing on safety protocols and an introduction to the dolphins and other marine species that inhabit the area. The guides, who are knowledgeable about the local ecosystem, share insights into dolphin behavior, biology, and conservation efforts.

Once aboard the safari boat, you embark on a journey into the inner waters of the Indian Ocean. As the boat moves further into the sea, you notice the climate and temperatures of the waters changing. Experienced guides navigate the waters with skill and expertise. They ensure that the boat glides across the waters with stability.
